REMEMBERING THE FLOOD OF 1999

Marking an important event

This month marks ten years since one of the worse events and one of the best experiences in the history of Riverdale City. Ten years ago, on July 11, 1999, the Weber-Davis Canal breached sending water, mud, and debris into 78 homes, changing many lives forever. It seemed the "Riverdale Flood," played no favorites and was everywhere very quickly.

That Sunday afternoon many watched in horror and amazement as the canal water carved a canyon in the hillside below the break. The muddy water covered the Pinebrook subdivision filling yards and basements with thick mud. The water then spread through the subdivision below until coming to rest in Golden Spike Park, turning it into a muddy reservoir.

Neighbors, friends, family and strangers soon became workmates in the battle to save lives and property. The area of the breach was directly above Carl Cook's property, the LDS Stake President serving at that time. He was an eyewitness and the first victim of the flood. He also became a great partner to the City Administration in the rescue and restoration efforts.

A magnificent team effort I hope never has to be equaled

The Mayor at that time, Ben Jones, headed up the city team with City Council members, office staff, public works and emergency services working day and night for over two weeks. The city worked side by side with the LDS Church, Red Cross, Swanson Family Foundation, local businesses and other organizations to assure that the affected residents and volunteers received the help and support they needed. Carl Cook headed up the LDS efforts with food, water and supply distribution, along with countless volunteer crews. Many of the crews were assigned to various homes until cleanup and restoration was complete and the home owner's lives were "back to normal". The people affected by the flood, either by being a victim or by being a volunteer will never be the same again.

No one would wish for a Disaster

While everyone would say they wish we could have avoided the canal break, most would admit they learned many valuable lessons from the experience. As a City Council member, I spent about 16 hours a day for 11 days helping and being amazed by the fantastic strength, courage, resourcefulness, love, kindness, cooperation and willingness to pull together exhibited by tens of thousands of people. The people of Riverdale, Weber County, all of Utah and many neighboring states were involved in the tremendous cleanup effort. I, for one, still look back ten years later with fond memories of the effort given by so many to help those that had been dealt such a devastating blow.

There are so many amazing facts as you think back, including no deaths, or even any serious injuries. All residents were able to return to their homes within a week. When FEMA arrived on Friday they couldn't believe it was a serious disaster because so much cleanup work had been completed and ultimately denied our request for federal assistance. I, for one, am grateful to have been an eyewitness to the greatness of our City and the overwhelming outpouring of compassion towards our residents. As we reflect upon that summer, it may truly be one of our finest times.

Thanks for all you do to make our City Great. - Bruce Burrows, Mayor
